TRANSGENDER BATHROOM RULE REVERSAL EXPECTED

1 President Donald Trump's administration was expected to revoke landmark guidelines issued to public schools in defense of transgender student rights. The draft reverses former Democratic President Barack Obama's signature initiative on transgender rights, which instructed public schools to allow transgender students to use the bathrooms matching their chosen gender identity. "I would expect further guidance to come out on that today," White House spokesman Sean Spicer told a news briefing on Wednesday. The draft document could be subject to change before it is sent to schools across the country. Its stated purpose is to withdraw the guidance of May 13, 2016, while Trump's Justice and Education departments continue to study the legal issues involved. REUTERS

TRUMP TO PLAY TWICE AS MUCH GOLF AS OBAMA

2 Despite responsibilities like filling hundreds of still-vacant federal job openings, working with congress to implement his many campaign promises and keeping America safe as commander in chief, Donald Trump has spent one fifth of his days as president so far on the golf course. By comparison, Barack Obama — according to Mark Knoller, a White House correspondent for CBS News — played 333 rounds of golf while serving as president. Of his 2,922 days in office, that means he played golf just around 11 percent of the time, or one-tenth. Trump is on pace to play twice as much golf as Obama. Why does this matter? The president certainly has the right, as does anyone else living in a free country, to engage in whatever leisure activities he prefers. But Trump is a hypocrite. Just check his Twitter. EVAN MACY

BELICHICK MAY TESTIFY IN HERNANDEZ TRIAL

3 Patriots head coach Bill Belichick and offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels are on a list of potential witnesses in the murder trial for former tight end and already-convicted murderer Aaron Hernandez. The coaches were among the more than 280 names mentioned on a list of potential defense witnesses. Belichick, McDaniels and Miami Dolphins center Mike Pouncey are listed with other people that Hernandez's lawyers may want to speak with and "reserves the right to add them later." Another document released Wednesday included transcripts of calls between Hernandez and Pouncey in which Hernandez describes people who would "try" (disrespect) him. Prosecutors want the calls to be submitted as evidence, according to WCVB. ERIN TIERNAN

ASTRONOMERS FIND SEVEN EARTH-SIZE PLANETS

5 Astronomers have found a nearby solar system with seven Earth-size planets, three of which circle their parent star at the right distance for liquid surface water, raising the prospect of life, research published on Wednesday showed. The star, known as TRAPPIST-1, is a small, dim celestial body in the constellation Aquarius. It is located about 40 light years away from Earth. Researchers said the proximity of the system, combined with the proportionally large size of its planets compared to the small star, make it a good target for follow-up studies. They hope to scan the planets' atmospheres for possible chemical fingerprints of life. REUTERS

DYLANN ROOF STOPPED AT SECOND CHURCH

4 Dylann Roof drove to another African-American church after killing nine black parishioners in Charleston, South Carolina, U.S. prosecutors said in newly unsealed court documents. Roof was sentenced to death after being found guilty of charges connected to the June 17, 2015, massacre at a Bible study meeting at Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church. In a September court filing released on Tuesday, federal prosecutors said that after the shooting, Roof fled the church with his gun and drove about 20 miles to Branch AME Church in Summerville. That church also has a predominantly African-American congregation and held a Bible study meeting on the night Roof drove to it. GPS evidence from Roof's car showed he slowed and then stopped at the church for two to three minutes, according to prosecutors. REUTERS

There are more than 400 sanctuary cities across the U.S., but only Massachusetts and California are considering becoming sanctuary states. FILE

Legislators propose measures to make Mass. a sanctuary state

More than 80 legislators have signed onto twin bills in state House, Senate.

ERIN TIERNAN
@erintiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

Massachusetts lawmakers are pushing back as the Trump Administration looks to ramp up deportations of undocumented immigrants.

More than 80 legislators have signed onto twin bills in the state House and Senate that would make Massachusetts a sanctuary state.

The bill would block Massachusetts law enforcement agencies from using local money or resources to enforce federal immigration law. The bill lays out 10 mandates designed to block detention of non-violent undocumented immigrants for federal immigration agents.

An estimated 180,000 undocumented immigrants live in the Boston metro area, which includes Cambridge, Newton and Nashua, New Hampshire, according to the Pew Research Center.

Supporters of sanctuary city policies argue mass deportation tears families apart and targets contributing members of communities, but opponents say they protect criminals and foster unsafe environments.

"The Safe Communities Act would protect the civil rights of all state residents by making sure our tax dollars are not used to help the Trump administration deport immigrant families," the bill's sponsor, Sen. Jaime Eldridge, said at a rally for immigrants and Muslims in Boston. His bill would also bar state participation in a Muslim registry, an idea touted by President Donald Trump while on the campaign trail.

While there are hundreds of cities and counties across the country that have enacted safe harbor policies for undocumented immigrants, no sanctuary policies exist on the state level.

Colorado could be considered a sanctuary state, as all 64 counties have adopted sanctuary policies, according to the Ohio Jobs and Justice Political Action Committee, and California lawmakers are also considering a statewide policy.

What is 'sanctuary'?

As it stands, no laws exist that explicitly define what makes a sanctuary community, but Trump's executive order on enhancing public safety gives his new attorney general the power to figure out that definition.

Generally, sanctuary policies refer to measures taken by cities to limit local cooperation with federal authorities by instructing public employees not to detain or report undocumented immigrants to federal immigration agents unless there is a warrant for the person's arrest, or if the person has a history of violent crimes.

Nine Massachusetts municipalities currently have sanctuary policies, including Boston, Somerville, Cambridge and Chelsea.

What are potential impacts?

Trump has vowed to cut federal funding from communities that provide safe harbor to undocumented immigrants, but many have questioned his ability to sidestep congressionally approved funding formulas.

"Cities that refuse to cooperate with federal authorities will not receive taxpayer dollars, and we will work with Congress to pass legislation to protect those jurisdictions that do assist federal authorities," Trump said last August during a campaign rally.

In Massachusetts, about a quarter of the state budget relies on federal dollars, to the tune of $11 billion.

Details of Trump's new deportation rules that worry an immigration lawyer

Here are the major takeaways and how these new regulations will affect not only immigrants but also taxpayers.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

President Donald Trump has carried through with campaign promises to crack down on undocumented immigrants. GETTY IMAGES

The Department of Homeland Security on Tuesday laid out guidelines for what appears to be an aggressive crackdown on undocumented immigrants — an approach championed by Donald Trump while he campaigned for the presidency.

Kari Hong, an expert in immigration law and professor at Boston College Law School, details four actions she finds most troubling:

1 Criminality

The focus of President Barack Obama's immigration policy was to prioritize deporting undocumented immigrants who committed "serious crimes," but these new directions "eliminate that divide," Hong said.

"Anyone now is a priority if they have committed any crime, including misdemeanors and infractions, or committed conduct that could be a crime, as determined by immigration officers," she said. That means at least eight million people are now designated as a "top priority" for deportation, including people who have not committed crimes, Hong said.

Carol Rose, executive director of the ACLU of Massachusetts, noted that the country will now "waste" its resources to go after people who have done nothing other than overstay their visa — which isn't a crime.

2 New border and immigration officers

The Department of Homeland Security intends to hire 5,000 new Border Patrol agents and 10,000 new Immigration and Customs Enforcement officers, for which the salaries alone would cost at least $50 million, Hong said.

The agency is also asking to have state and local governments identify and detain noncitizens. This would be voluntary, yet experts fear that cities and towns will cooperate out of fear of retaliation.

Many states and cities have previously opted out of this partnership because "over half of the people swept up didn't have any criminal convictions, and local and state governments were on the hook for detention costs that ran into the millions while ICE figured out what to do" with those people, Hong said. Local municipalities were never reimbursed by the federal government.

Undocumented neighbors

Undocumented Immigrants by the Numbers, according to the Pew Research Center

New York City metro area, which includes suburbs in northern New Jersey, western Connecticut and northeastern Pennsylvania: 1,150,000

Boston metro area, which includes Cambridge, Newton and Nashua, New Hampshire: 180,000

Boston alone: 35,000

3 Immigration hearing

"As a practical matter, under existing law, everyone is entitled to a hearing," Hong said.

These are necessary, as half of the people who appear before an immigration judge are found to have a right to stay in the U.S., she added.

The new guidelines would circumvent that process.

Currently, about a half-million people are awaiting hearings, Hong said, adding that there is a three-year wait for them.

Homeland Security has said nothing about hiring more immigration lawyers. If another eight million undocumented immigrants now considered "priority" are added to the existing backlog, it could take up to 50 years to give everyone a hearing, Hong said.

The Trump administration said that they will expand "expedited removal" to avoid this. That process is intended for someone who was previously deported and re-entered the U.S., Hong said, not for someone who has never gone through the hearing process.

4 Detention centers and public cost

Taxpayers currently contribute $2 billion a year for the detention of about 400,000 noncitizens, Hong said.

"If we increase that for every new million noncitizens detained, we're looking at detention costs of $5 billion, all going to for-profit, private companies," she said.

This increased cost to the taxpayer will come at the same time that money contributed by immigrants will be leaving our economy.

Amber Tamblyn is having fun with kid's name

News has broken that Amber Tamblyn and husband David Cross have welcomed a baby girl, and honestly I couldn't be more pleased with this announcement.

Tamblyn, 33, shared the news on her Instagram. "David and I are proud to announce the birth of our daughter, Dauphinoise Petunia Brittany Scheherazade Von Funkinstein Mustard Witch RBG Cross Tamblyn-Bey Jr. #TheFutureIsFemale."

Lots of news outlets are taking this name very seriously, and even suggesting that maybe the nickname Mustard Witch isn't so bad; but Tamblyn and Cross, 52, have a history of being pretty hilarious.

Congratulations to the happy couple, and to RBG Cross Tamblyn-Bey Jr. herself for having the best parents.

Lauryn Hill is now a grandmother

Picture this: It's 1998. Lauryn Hill's debut solo album, "The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill" is changing your entire life. One of your favorite songs is "To Zion," a beautiful and tender ode to Hill's first child. Carlos Santana lends the track an understated lil' twang. You sit in your bedroom, one tear falling down your face in slow motion, thinking, "Man, this song is really, really lovely." Remember that?

Well just in case you want to feel superold, let me tell you something: Lauryn Hill, 41, is a grandmother now, because Zion — the subject of that wonderful song — just had a freaking baby.

It's been 20 years since Hill penned the song, and now her eldest son is 19 years old and a father to his first child. According to Billboard, Zion welcomed his son Zephaniah last week, continuing the family trend of using exotic and deep sounding names from the Bible.

Zion is one of five children between Hill and Rohan Marley. There's also Sarah, Selah, John and Joshua.

Kim Kardashian squashes sex-tape rumors

For some reason, there's a rumor that Kim Kardashian has filmed a new sex tape. According to Daily Mail, rumors of an "explicit video" starring the 36-year-old reality star were reported by Britain's Mirror newspaper. Apparently the leaked footage is mostly just Kardashian sitting on a bed in some — probably unnecessarily elaborate — lingerie. But her rep told the Daily Mail it's not true: "It's the same old tape." If you somehow don't remember, Kardashian found fame after her sex tape with then-boyfriend Ray J was leaked and distributed. It's the whole reason we've been blessed with the Kardashian clan as America's most famous, most divisive, most annoying reality-television family. Honestly? We do not thank Kim Kardashian enough. The mother of two has slowly been making her way back on social media after her terrible ordeal in Paris. So yeah, I don't think a sex tape is really in the cards for her right now. She's kind of moved beyond that, don't you think?

Allison Williams' life after Marnie

Allison Williams plays a woman who doesn't tell her parents that her current boyfriend (Daniel Kaluuya) is black in Jordan Peele's horror film "Get Out." JUSTIN LUBIN

TV isn't just a huge time-suck for viewers; same goes for TV actors. Because she's spent six seasons as Marnie on "Girls," Allison Williams hasn't had the chance to do any movies. At least her first is "Get Out," the directorial debut of Jordan Peele (of "Key & Peele") and a bracing and scathing film about race in America in the form of a terrifying horror movie. She plays Rose, a woman taking her boyfriend Chris (Daniel Kaluuya) to meet her parents in the suburbs. They don't know he's black, and pretty soon Chris begins to suspect something very, very weird is afoot.

How was making your first movie?

The biggest difference was realizing I only had about 15 minutes total to introduce an audience to a person, rather than six years to ease them into someone like Marnie. Those first scenes became really important, just in terms of giving people a good sense of who she is very quickly. Which sounds really obvious if you've done a million movies, but for me it was a bizarre challenge.

Were there other unexpected challenges being in your first movie?

The finality of it is really weird. With "Girls" I was always somewhat comforted knowing that we'll be back next year, can't wait to see what happens with them with time. But we [the "Get Out" crew] are still very close, especially because the movie is a bit risky. It was kind of unique to go through together.

Another big first for you is that it's a big movie, meaning it plays theaters, not on TVs or personal devices or however people want to see it.

I think a movie like this is best consumed in a group of strangers in a theater. On "Girls," I've always been pretty realistic about the ways people consume it. My emphasis on seeing it live, because it's not like a "Red Wedding" spoilery show, is much more intense now that I'm working with material that should be seen in a theater when it comes out — not on your laptop or your iPad at some point. That's not obvious immediately, because ["Get Out"] doesn't have a lot of CGI or effects. It's more about the communal experience if anything. If you're going to watch it at home, have people over as a group. Then you have the call-and-response with the movie itself.

How did you react to seeing yourself on a big screen?

I got really emotional when I saw the Universal logo. Which surprised me, because it just means, in my associative brain, that it's an official movie. [Laughs] I was like, "Oh my gosh, I'm in a real honest-to-god movie!" It's sounds really weird, but that was my reaction to it.

Let's all binge-watch 'Supernatural'

Geek Girl in Hollywood

JENNA BUSCH
legionofleia.com

Jared Padalecki and Jensen Ackles have spent a dozen years battling monsters on "Supernatural." THE CW

I've been binge-watching "Supernatural" for a project. I used to watch it live, years ago, but sort of fell off of the train. It's been lovely to rediscover what I'd missed. So I wanted to write about the show that lately has made my evenings a blast.

I've talked before about the joy of binge-watching old shows you used to love. Having "Friends" on in the background is soothing. I know the lines. I've heard all the jokes. And yet I still laugh — the familiarity is relaxing in a world that is kind of a mess. With "Supernatural" though, I've got a ton of seasons I haven't seen and a world I can completely immerse myself in.

If you haven't watched it yet, it's the story of brothers Sam and Dean (Jared Padalecki and Jensen Ackles), whose mother was killed by a demon when they were little. The kids were trained by their father to hunt and destroy demons, ghosts and other supernatural creatures. (It's gotten a lot more complicated over the years, but that's the basic idea.)

I wrote last week about how the 22-episode model doesn't really work anymore. Though there are definitely filler episodes, this show has a depth to its mythology that few others have. Some seasons were procedurals. Some have a much deeper through line. The relationships have had time to build up over the years, and 12 seasons in, it feels like you've known these guys forever.

There is something about a show with a vast mythology that gets people hooked. "Supernatural" has urban legends, ghost stories, angels and other things with sometimes thousands of years of history. Some of them are stories you might have heard from grandparents. Some of the ghosts and ghouls are new. Either way, it's a show full of fun facts that stick in your head. You can take a deep dive into these things and spend half the night on Wikipedia.

It's been fun taking a break from the world, peeling back the fictional layers of reality and getting to know characters that have been around for years. So, who wants to marathon it with me?

Igloos, ahoy!

The Seaport hotel has found an off-season solution for its outdoor bar.

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

A city-sweeping rooftop view is worth a thousand likes — or, if you're a trendy new hotel, it's one of the reasons why your outdoor bar stays packed from May through September. However, in a city like Boston, where the wind chill is wicked in the uncool sense, how do you make use of your killer views through the winter?

Well, the Envoy clearly has it figured out. The Waterfront hotel has a fleet of six see-through "igloos" that popped up on its Lookout bar patio earlier this month.

"The igloos are technically for gardening," explains Rob Saunders, Lookout Rooftop and Bar's general manager. "We were trying to figure out ways to utilize the rooftop space, so we put some LED lights, a [space] heater and a ceiling light fixture into them."

And boom — igloo.

Each space can seat eight to 10 people, and is on a first-come, first-served basis Thursday through Saturday nights. There's a one-drink minimum per guest, but don't worry, you won't ever have to step into the cold when you need a refill.

"We installed a light fixture with a red bulb in each igloo," explains Saunders. "When you turn the light on, a cocktail server knows you're ready for a refill."

The igloo pop-up will serve the Lookout's cocktail menu, as well as some specialty hot drinks for the season. They can also be booked ahead for two-hour increments, with no rental fee — just call ahead to the restaurant. (The aforementioned beverage minimum still applies.)

The glowing igloos at Lookout will be up through mid-April, and Saunders' team plans to retire them for the season until the chill hits again come next October.

Consider them this year's Lawn on D swings.

Exit Strategy

This play by Ike Holter focuses on a group of public-school teachers, administrators and students in Chicago, facing the closure of their condemned school—condemned for pretty much everything, from bad test scores to a crumbling building. They come up with a plan to campaign for public support on social media, but will it be too little, too late?

Above the Standard: the Rafanelli Experience

Folks in the hospitality industry will want to catch this conversation between Bryan Rafanelli and Garrett Harker, hosted by the Society for Event Planners: Restaurant Venues. Rafanelli is one of the country's top event planners, with clients including major corporations, nonprofits and even the White House. Harker, a local restaurateur, is the mind behind several mega-popular establishments, including Row 34 and Island Creek Oyster Bar.

DANCE

The Roxbury Center for the Performing Arts presents this Black History Month performance, which they describe as "a soul-stirring and toe-tapping celebration of African-American history." "Sankofa" is a word in the Ghanaian Twi language, meaning "Go back and get it", part of a longer proverb: "It is not wrong to go back for that which you have forgotten."

MUSIC

Twista

Chicago MC Twista claims to be the world's fastest rapper, and while he has some worthy rivals, he did score the Guinness World Record in 1992. He's mostly known for his freakish skill, but he also scored a No. 1 hit with "Slow Jamz" in 2003. His latest album was 2014's "Dark Horse."

ART

Wilson/Cortor

This exhibit pairs contemporary African-American artists John Wilson and Eldzier Cortor, showing their differing approaches to the black experience in prints, drawings and paintings. Wilson tends to be more realistic; Cortor, more abstract. Many of Cortor's images depict women in white dresses and headscarves, symbols of strength, we're told, inspired by his time in the Gullah Islands.

Come hungry, sinners

Where to find king cake, hurricanes and plenty of loud brass for Mardi Gras.

RACHEL RACZKA

Chef Jason Santos brings his New Orleans-themed concept to Back Bay just in time for Mardi Gras. The brand new Buttermilk & Bourbon features rooms inspired by the Southern city's most famous neighborhoods including the French Quarter and the Garden District. The offerings include New Orleans barbecue shrimp, oysters prepared Louisiana-style, and of course, beignets all day. They'll also be serving hurricanes on tap (!!!) and frozen hand grenades, the extra-boozy, melony favorite that is probably the reason why what happens on Bourbon Street stays on Bourbon Street.
160 Commonwealth Ave., buttermilkbourbon.com

Tiffani Faison's Sweet Cheeks celebrates Fat Tuesday with a traditional crawfish boil with seatings at 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. The Fenway barbecue joint will dish out gumbo and king cake alongside a spicy, buttery sausage, shrimp and crawfish boil a la New Orleans.

Bourbon Street-inspired (and probably bourbon, the liquor, heavy) cocktails made special for the evening will also be available a la carte.
$40, 1381 Boylston St., 617-266-1300

The Barking Crab is offering a New England spin on a 'Nawlins classic: Cajun lobster jambalaya. The Seaport mainstay will simmer Maine lobster with veg, New Orleans spice and their house Crab on Fire hot sauce for one spicy slurp after another. Wash it down with a house hurricane made with rum and passion fruit syrup, going down easy at $9 a pop.
Feb. 28, 11:30 a.m. to close, 88 Sleeper St., barkingcrab.com

Saloon is channelling Bourbon Street for a one-night live jazz takeover, with impeccably named The Be Nice or Leave! Brass Band. Louisiana fare — including beignets and shrimp and grits — will be flying from the kitchen while the bar is pouring out Vieux Carre — a classic cocktail named for the city's oldest 'hood — made with cognac, rye, Benedictine and sweet vermouth.

The prelude to a 'Kiss'

Lyric Stage's upcoming "Stage Kiss" explores a romance within a romance.

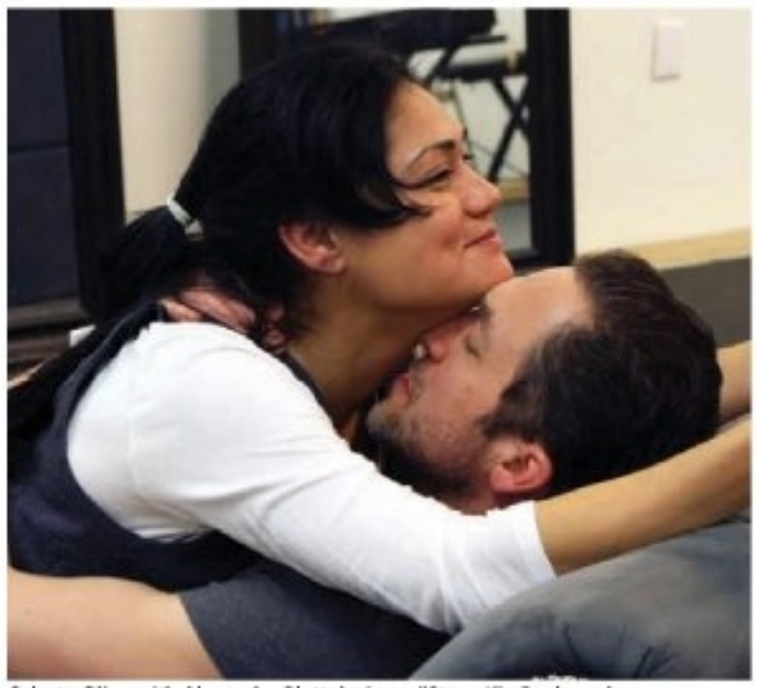
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us



Celeste Oliva with Alexander Platt during a "Stage Kiss" rehersal. PROVIDED

Celeste Oliva says she considers both New York and Boston to be her home cities. The actress, who's starred in Lyric Stage's "Chinglish" and will play She in their upcoming production of "Stage Kiss," also lives a dual life in the Sarah Ruhl-penned comedy. A play within a play — which Oliva says is really "two plays within a play" — "Stage Kiss" gets meta by exploring the unique career requirements of an actor.

"Can you seriously imagine going in for a job, and part of your interview is kissing someone you've never met?" Oliva laughs.

Oliva's character, She, is opposite He, her former lover, who gets cast opposite her in a '30s drama. She and He are both married to other people but find themselves immediately intimate once again — on stage. Of course, complications and drama ensue.

We chat with Oliva about the awkwardness of kissing on stage and understanding her character's complicated dilemma.

How does the concept of doing a play within a play with another play come through?
It starts with She, a woman, who has been married for some time and used to be an actress. She gets cast from an audition, goes to rehearsal and her scene partner is her old lover. They're required to kiss so much that the lines are blurred and they start a romance. There's the play [that they're cast in] which is a 1930's drama, then there's also a "Pretty Woman" meets "The Stage," but then there's also a love story.

And She and He are both married to other people when they reunite. How was it for you to play a character who is knowingly entering an affair?
I guess it might seem now that I play a lot of characters who do this. [Laughs] But I'm not personally someone who would do this. I think for the character [I played] in "Chinglish," that person wanted a lover on the side. The woman I play now wants a clean break. She's fallen in love again.

I think it's very difficult to kiss someone you don't even know, let alone someone you had a relationship with, and keep that line from blurring into reality. By kissing, you become more intimate. "Stage Kiss" talks about those relationships within a play, and how you negotiate those in real life.

Live kissing on demand must sometimes create confusion. How do you set boundaries as an actor, emotionally, physically, professionally?
I think as a woman you have to know what you're going up against. Sarah Ruhl writes in a way where you have to wait for stage direction from the director. [As an actor] you show up for the audience, and have to be vulnerable already. When you ask for a stage direction, you have to remember to protect yourself, and learn to open yourself up in a healthy way.

Southern style

The lower half of Thailand is a trove of natural treasures.

Fodor's Travel

Tup Island's main attraction is a sand bar you can use to explore the island next door at low tide. GETTY IMAGES

These southwestern Thailand hot spots may be less traveled than better-known (and crowded!) Phuket, but that's all the more reason to make this your next vacation destination.

Tup Island

It may look like a lot of the islands you'll find in southern Thailand, with pristine white sand surrounded by turquoise water. But low tide reveals a sand bar that connects it to a neighboring island, which you can easily walk across while experiencing the ocean lapping at your feet from two directions. Accessible by boat from Ao Nang in the Krabi province, Tup Island is not to be missed.

Railay Beach

This is one of arguably one of the most beautiful beaches in Thailand. Located on a peninsula between Krabi and Ao Nang, the beach is only accessible by boat due to the steep karst rock surrounding it — once there, a stroll through the magnificent and cavernous limestone walkway is a must. There's also an area for rock climbing, and several nearby hotel restaurants.

Dim sum

Trang's cuisine is unique compared with the rest of Thailand, thanks to the influx of Chinese immigrants in the 18th century. Today, this influence is most obvious in Trang's abundance of dim sum restaurants. At Pong O Cha restaurant, hungry diners can browse display cases filled with samples of all the delectable dishes on the menu like roasted pork, steamed buns and shumai.

Emerald Cave

Located on the west side of Koh Mook is the extraordinary Emerald Cave. Accessible only during a calm low tide, visitors swim through a dark craggy tunnel to get to the cave's hidden gem: a secret beach surrounded by lush cliffs and an emerald lagoon. Time your visit carefully, as high tide or bad weather will have you stuck waiting on the lagoon side or unable to visit completely.

Trang Night Market

Culinary delights in Trang don't end with dim sum. If you're adventurous (and even if you're not), a trip to the Weekend Night Market is worth your time. Held right in front of the town's train station, this market's purveyors are more than happy to oblige your indulgences. From fresh fruits to crispy fried taro cakes and brightly colored jelly candies shaped like rubber duckies, the market has something for everyone. There's even a stall hawking fresh sushi. Some sellers speak English if you have questions about what's on the menu, and many of the stalls have illustrated signs that communicate the main ingredient.

Trang Night Market
WORLDCITIZEN, FLICKR

Koh Kradan

One of the more idyllic islands off the coast of Trang is Koh Kradan. This small island is an ideal destination for a day trip due to its tiny size (only a little less than two miles long) and serene setting. It's the perfect location for swimming or relaxing on the white soft sand. Because the island is off the beaten path, you won't run into many other tourists while visiting, which will allow you to pretend this tropical paradise is all yours.

Anantara Si Kao Spa

For a respite from all the sun and outdoor activities, pamper yourself at Anantara Si Kao resort's rejuvenating spa. The tranquil spa has a wide-ranging menu offering beauty treatments and aromatherapies, but the main reason to visit are the massages.

Snorkeling

With water so clear, bright and inviting, snorkeling in southern Thailand is a must. Many hotels offer excursions to some of the best snorkeling spots just off the nearby islands, such as Koh Kradan and Koh Gai (translated into English it means Chicken Island, named after the unique rock formation that looks like a chicken's head). Your ability to see the colorful and friendly schools of fish that inhabit the oceans here will be dependent on the weather conditions, but a jump into the ocean with snorkeling gear will at least allow you to take in the gorgeous aquatic surroundings.

Thailand's largest swimming pool

Sure, the beaches in Thailand are some of the best in the world. But sometimes you just want to relax poolside, and Sofitel Krabi's got you covered. Located about 30 minutes from Krabi town, the resort's lagoon-style pool is the largest in Thailand at over 75,000 square feet. The pool also has a section just for kids, a swim-up bar and direct access via a private entrance for select ground floor suites, which allows guests to swim to the main pool from their terrace.

Dining on Koh Mook

Dashing around islands and partaking in ocean activities will work up an appetite. When hunger strikes while you're on a day excursion, head to the Sivalai Beach Resort restaurant on Koh Mook. The food here is just as incredible as the dining room's ocean views. Koh Mook is also home to the Emerald Cave, on the other side of the island.

Who knew this little town in Washington state was so cool?

Fodor's Travel

Surprisingly hip Spokane

There's plenty of natural wonder, but also tons of quirky fun in the Washington state town. JEFF HOLLETT, FLICKR

From the favorite haunts of a famous crooner to a hunt for buried missile silos, Spokane offers the curious plenty of the exciting and unusual to see and do.

The Centennial Trail

If you love to run, walk or cycle, the Centennial Trail stretches roughly 40 miles, clinging to the banks of the Spokane River while passing through woodlands, downtown Spokane, all the way to the Idaho border.

Bing Museum

The celebrated crooner Bing Crosby grew up in Spokane in a Craftsman-style house built in 1911 by his father and uncles. Today, that home is the Bing Crosby House Museum, and open to the public (admission is free!) with hundreds of items from Bing's childhood.

Hoopfest

Hoopfest is a big street party with a basketball tournament in the middle. The June event takes over downtown Spokane with 3-on-3 outdoor basketball matches — if you're feeling the urge to play, anyone with a group can sign up to be among the roughly 7,000 teams competing on 450 courts sprawled across 40 blocks.

Arbor Crest Wine Cellar

Fine wine and superb views can be had at Arbor Crest Wine Cellar, perched atop a 450-foot cliff overlooking Spokane Valley. The winery features the Florentine Cliff House Estate (a national historic landmark) and Wine Bar, the aforementioned spectacular views, leisurely strolls across the grounds, great food and of course, plenty of wine.

Cat Tale's Zoo

If you want to observe big cats up close, Cat Tale's Zoo, just north of Spokane, is the place. Bobcats, cougars, leopards, lions, tigers and more are cared for at this big-cat rehabilitation and zoological training center. Many of the cats were rescued or placed here from other sites where their chances of survival weren't all that great.

Mary Lou's Milk Bottle

Spokane's Garland District is home to Mary Lou's Milk Bottle, a two-story building in the shape of a gargantuan milk bottle. It's also a classic American diner, serving up burgers, fries and yummy milkshakes (try the huckleberry), with a hefty dose of retro charm.

Post Street Bridge

This concrete arch bridge spanning the Spokane River offers marvelous views of the river and falls. If you're a true-crime buff, come for a slice of history about the Newport Creamery robbery, the murder of Marshall George Conniff and how the crime was finally solved more than 50 years later.

Boo Radley's

One of the best gift shops in town, Boo Radley's combines the vibe of a curiosity shop with a vintage toy store. It's a great spot to find an unusual gift for a friend or spend some time browsing through the unexpected. Original and creative toys, cards, games, T-shirts, masks and statuettes are just some of the treasures you'll find inside this playful downtown establishment.

MR. MAYO

God bless American athletes who embrace being fat. Charles Barkley just wasn't the same when he got skinny for a minute a few years back. At least former Phillies great John Kruk still owns it.

Kruk is opening his own Philly cheesesteak shop this month (absolutely unreal that it took this long), and he says that you'll be able to put mayonnaise on your cheesesteak if you want to. What the F is more American than that?

"We've been doing a lot of taste-testing," Kruk told PhillyMag. "I probably had three or four cheesesteaks just the other day. My favorite is with American cheese, grilled onions, ketchup and mayo. ... I've had a lot of people question me about the mayo part. Remember though, I'm not from Philly."

For the record, Kruk is from West Virginia, where — yeah — they love them some white condiment.

CONCUSSION CRISIS

It was only a matter of time before former NFL players began blaming reckless behavior on concussions and CTE. Cedric Benson, who was the fourth overall pick in the NFL Draft in 2005, was charged with driving while intoxicated last weekend in Texas. The 34-year-old former running back refused a field sobriety test, and when asked by a police officer to recite the alphabet, Benson said: "I can't do that because I played eight years in the NFL," according to the Austin-American Statesman.

Last year, Dr. Bennet Omalu told ABC News that he would bet his medical license that O.J. Simpson is suffering from CTE. Omalu even went so far as to say O.J. had a higher risk of CTE because his head was so big.

"If you have a bigger head that means your head is heavier," Omalu told People magazine. "That means the momentum of your impact would be bigger. It's basic physics."

CRUNCH TIME

MATT BURKE

INSTAGRAM 'ZINGER'

This season hasn't exactly gone as planned for Knicks star Kristaps Porzingis. His team is going to miss the playoffs yet again, they may trade his buddy Carmelo Anthony, and he's enduring something of a sophomore slump.

When in doubt? Make googly eyes at an Instagram model. Porzingis put a few eyeball emojis in Instagram model Abigail Ratchford's (pictured) IG comments section Tuesday night and actually got a response from her. Ratchford responded with a kissing lips emoji, so that means they're definitely now dating.

The Zinger would be a step up for Ratchford literally and figuratively as she once allegedly hooked up with Johnny Manziel.

AINGE WILL FIND RIGHT TEAM, TIME TO MAKE BLOCKBUSTER

The standards are simply ridiculous in this town.

The Celtics have gone nearly nine years without a championship, the longest pro sports title drought in Boston right now. But make no mistake. What Danny Ainge has already done in rebuilding this franchise twice now is a basketball miracle. In fact, if it wasn't for Bill Belichick — Ainge would be the one hailed as Boston's resident sports genius.

The Celtics are currently second in the East. They lured their first big free agent name to Boston last summer. They currently own draft picks from the Nets that could land in the top three this year and next. Even if Ainge does not make a blockbuster trade today, the Celtics are set up to be among the top-five teams in the NBA for the next six or seven years.

Rebuilding in the NBA is a tricky deal. Rarely do those two quarters and five dimes for one dollar deals work out for the non-paper currency teams (shhh ... don't tell Chicago and Indiana execs that this week). Completely tanking in this league rarely works.

Four out of the five best teams in the NBA right now record-wise are where they are because of smart drafting, key free agent signings and shrewd trading. The Cavs are the only top team that "tanked" to get their superstar in LeBron James and that was 14 years ago. Golden State selected Stephen Curry No. 7 overall in 2009. San Antonio selected Kawhi Leonard 15th overall in 2011. The Rockets traded for James Harden in 2012, and the Celtics traded for Isaiah Thomas two years ago.

Yes, it feels like Isaiah has been with the Celtics forever, but really — that was only 735 days ago. And that franchise-abducting trade with the Nets that set all of this up? That wasn't even four years ago, as Ainge traded Garnett and Paul Pierce to Brooklyn on June 28, 2013. Ainge gutted the franchise that day, and typically when you do that — it takes six or seven years to even get back to relevancy. But the Celtics missed the playoffs just once after that deal (in 2014). They were back in the dance in 2015, and they took another step forward last year — grabbing the five seed in the East with 48 wins.

Will they take another step forward? Of course they will.

It is a complete joke when the basketball illiterate people who host radio shows in this town (and there are many) say that Ainge holds on to his assets too long. That type of stuff was said in 2005 and 2006 too, just prior to the Garnett and Ray Allen trades. These dummies also complained that Ainge was waiting too long to deal away Garnett and Paul Pierce when they were getting long in the tooth. I recall bitching as far back as 2009-10 — a season in which the Celtics eventually took the Lakers to Game 7 of the NBA Finals — that outlined how Ainge was a hypocrite for holding on to Garnett and Pierce too long. (Ainge once joked with Red Auerbach that he should trade a 32-year-old Larry Bird).

Most don't remember this, but the Celtics nearly traded Garnett to the Clippers in February 2013 in exchange for DeAndre Jordan and Eric Bledsoe, and nearly traded Paul Pierce to Atlanta in exchange for Josh Smith. That would have been the "quick fix" route.

Instead, Ainge held on to his assets until he found a team that would panic. The Nets panicked, and are the Minnesota Vikings in the NBA's Herschel Walker deal. In 2007, the Timberwolves also panicked and traded Garnett to the Celtics.

Maybe Ainge finds a team that panics today, or maybe he doesn't. Just know that he eventually will find that team.

Today is a huge day for Celtics boss Danny Ainge. GETTY IMAGES

Aries What you do for others doesn't need to be broadcast. Let your actions speak for you. Opportunity will be yours if you do what's right. Fair play will win favors.

Taurus Don't get involved in the personal affairs of others. Meddling on your part will turn out to be costly. Stay focused on what you can do to make things better.

Gemini Think big, but be reasonable. Your dreams will spark ideas that push you to make a difference. Improving your efficiency will lead to a new beginning.

Cancer Don't take on too much or trust someone to do things for you. The realization that your future depends on your actions will help you move forward.

Leo You can learn much from people of different backgrounds. Traveling and taking part in the pursuits of children and loved ones will be inspiring.

Virgo You must realistically look at your life and how you live it. If you have taken on too much, you need to ask for help or cut back.

Libra Your true feelings should be expressed if you want to bring about the changes required to ensure happiness and satisfaction in the future. Don't live a lie.

Scorpio Keep your emotions in check. If you are too revealing, someone will take advantage of your vulnerability. Make perfection and precision your goal, and signature.

Sagittarius Stay on track. You'll be easily distracted by what others say or do. Choose to do your own thing and set goals that will help you get ahead.

Capricorn Follow your instincts. Problems when dealing with foreigners, institutions or authority figures will arise if you travel or get involved with unpredictable people.

Aquarius If you reconnect with people you have worked with in the past, you will form a new alliance that will bring everyone involved greater opportunity.

Pisces Take care of business and avoid complaints. You can't please everyone, but as long as you don't leave anything unfinished, your conscience will be clear. EUGENIA LAST

DANCE

A REFLECTION OF THE SOUL

Awakening the magic of ancient China through folklore, artistry, and grace

SHEN YUN PERFORMING ARTS

Classical Chinese Dance with Live Orchestra

THROUGH THE UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE of music and dance, Shen Yun weaves a wondrous tapestry of heavenly realms, ancient legends, and modern heroic tales, taking you on a journey through 5,000 years of Chinese culture. Its stunning beauty and tremendous energy leave audiences uplifted and inspired.

A Shen Yun performance features the world's foremost classically trained dancers, a unique orchestra blending East and West, and dazzling animated backdrops—together creating one spectacular performance.

Animated Background

With state-of-the-art graphics technology, Shen Yun's digital-backdrop team creates vividly animated settings, extending the stage and transporting the audience to a world where heaven and earth are one.

The backdrops are as grand as they are intricate. So remarkably true to life, they allow you to forget where you are, and journey to another place and time.

Exquisite Costumes

Shen Yun's costume artists collect countless designs of traditional attire, ranging from those of emperors, ministers, and generals to the everyday clothing of the common people. They use bright colors to tailor and recreate hundreds of new pieces each season. Every detail is given meticulous attention and is a result of artistic inspiration and careful polishing. The designers stress harmonic balance and contrast. Their objective is an authentic presentation of the attire that comes from China's divinely inspired traditional culture, and a consummate stage effect.
